Rats Lab	Rats have an exceptional sense of smell and are often associated with laboratory testing. We flip that idea: instead of the rat being tested in the lab, the rat runs the lab and makes the perfumes.
Sniff & Tell	A play on “kiss and tell.”
Snorted	“Snorted” is usually associated with inhaling something through the nose, especially drugs. We take that same act and apply it to fragrance... you don't snort drugs, you snort perfume. It gives a familiar term a new, rebellious meaning.
Alibi	An alibi is a story that proves you were somewhere else. But scent can give you away. You may leave the room, but your fragrance stays behind as evidence.
Nose Job	A nose job is a procedure done to change the nose. Here, it's a job for the nose — a perfume that gives your nose something worth experiencing. It also sounds like “nice job,” adding another layer to the name.
Jamais vu	The opposite of DEJA VU, Jamais vu is the feeling of something familiar suddenly seeming unfamiliar.
Liminal	Liminal means being between two states or places. Perfume exists somewhere between the skin and the air, the person and their surroundings, and the physical and the emotional.
Proust Effect	Inspired from the placebo effect, the Proust Effect is when a smell brings back a strong memory. Perfume has the ability to take you back to a person, place or moment through scent alone.
Relapse	Relapse means returning to something you had stopped or left behind. A fragrance can make you do exactly that
PDA	Stands for Public Display of Affection.
V 2.0

AUDACITY	Audacity means having the confidence to do something bold or unconventional. The name fits a perfume brand that doesn't follow the usual rules of fragrance and isn't afraid to be different.
ONE NIGHT STAND	A one-night stand is something intense, memorable & subtly gives the message that our perfumes last for a whole night
Black Market	The black market is where things are traded outside the usual system. For a perfume brand, it can represent making fragrances outside the traditional rules and conventions of the industry.
Dark Horse	A dark horse is an unexpected person or contender who surprises everyone. It fits a perfume brand that comes from nowhere and challenges the established names.
First Degree	"First degree" is used in law to describe the most serious level of an offence, giving the name an element of danger and intensity. It also works for fragrance through the idea of a first-degree impression... the first thing people notice about you.
Middle Finger	The middle finger is a universal gesture of defiance. As a perfume brand, it becomes a direct rejection of conventional fragrance
Dog tag	A dog tag is an identification tag worn by soldiers. It connects to perfume through the idea of identity — your fragrance can become your own identifying mark or signature.
Dead drop	A dead drop is a secret location where something is left for someone else to collect, often associated with espionage. It connects beautifully to perfume because you leave your scent behind even after you've left.
SPIRIT ANIMAL	A spirit animal is an animal that represents a person's character, identity or qualities. Perfume works similarly — a scent can represent a side of your personality or the person you want to be.
Sideburn	A sideburn is the burn mark left on a surface by a cigarette or joint while smoking.
HOT BOX	"Hot box" refers to a closed space filled with smoke, especially in cannabis culture. The connection to perfume is simple: fill the room with scent instead of smoke.

bootlegger	A bootlegger is someone who illegally makes or sells something, especially associated with alcohol during Prohibition. For a perfume brand, it suggests making something outside the established system.
